NOVEMBER & DECEMBER BOOK A WELLNESS APPOINTMENT FOR YOUR SENIOR PET

“Pets are living longer thanks to better veterinary care, and just like humans, these aging cats and dogs need special care.”

Quote from Purdue University veterinarian

“Improvements in veterinary care, diagnostics and earlier intervention make it possible for us to enjoy our pets longer, but key to that enjoyment is helping them to enjoy their later years to the fullest,” says Lorraine Corriveau, a wellness veterinarian in the School of Veterinary Medicine.

“The attitudes of both veterinarians and pet owners toward our senior pets are changing. The belief now is that age is not a disease, and veterinary medicine is emphasizing senior pet health through preventive and wellness programs.”

Senior Wellness Appointment

During this appointment we will discuss any changes in behaviour, eating, drinking, and urinating. Some pets may not be showing signs of disease in the early stages; they may even actually hide signs and symptoms.

The best way to determine if your pet is suffering from “old age” ailments is to book an appointment for a physical exam where your veterinarian can advise you if any lab work or other diagnostic testing should be done.

Early detection means your pet can live longer, more comfortably win , win for everyone !
